

Instead of economic liberation the "big boys" are fighting for economic rehabilitation. Sounds good, don't it? She do, but there is sand in the oyster. How can they rehabilitate something we never had, an economic break?

And thereby hangs a tale.

Devaluation of the gold content of dollar functions, in the reverse, actions of increased taxation. Merits of relative positions are beyond me and I fear the nation will pull an "effie fay" or "gerty hoffman."

Recurrence and reversion to or back are outside the merits of the case, as:

Recurr to what?

Revert to what?

What we want is improvement on that what was and on that what is — and to get that we are willing to recur, revert or stand on our head.

Rehabilitation will not fetch the bacon.

It may give us what was, but what was it?

It is the choosing of a lesser evil than you have.

Why dwell in the realm of evils?

Why demand evil only less onerous?

It's like hollering for smaller cracks in your walls.

I suppose you want ventilation?

Nail a board over 'em!
