

The workers of U.S. positively refuse to take-over the sad remains of the parasites system, at this time, because all available shovels are sunk in good roads for the pleasure-bent, Super-bridges for the shop-keepers (also good diving-off places) and other such specimens of grandeur as modern jails, dams, canals, ocean-barricades, parks, modicum of bait for the poverty stricken warriors in foreign lands, plus modernization of backward countries etc — sell 'em one super-car and one super-plane and the next thing we know the foreigners are underselling us in our own products — foreign trade in a competitive starvation.

Super-Ego — the other guy isn't supposed to have any marbles of his own.

But, I am reminded: "Gee whizz! look at all the gold we got in them yar hills and all the debts we can repudiate simply by saying all right, Vandervoort, whistle." — Horse dandruff! Do you think the commonwealth of toil is as crooked as the chiselers oligarchy — its Nosir, we want no part of the parasites system, at this time — for we are hep to the fact that outgoing politicians maneuver so as to put the incoming pole cats into a hole — it stinks.

Nosir, The score is nothing and nothing (0-0) and we start with the crack of the bat... When and if we start.

all greasy as whale-oil lubrication.

We cannot live on our reputation and as we grow older we must realize reputation makes for inaction. Well and good, we must concede that reputation is the voice of experience and valuable in that sense only. However, that is no reason why the experienced should intrude their reputation into experiences other than their own. They should sound-off their experiences and not try to hog further experiences after the measure of life is full.