

Two or more economic systems at loggerheads resolves the matter into ultra-competition, and, imagine that some of the boys will pull-in their horns before the competition runs into desuetude (It's tough!) Our participation in the race is merely in the time honored moves of distraction and an occasional economic spoke in the wheel, in hopes that times healing office will cause the opposing system to go stale — this is possible because all current economic systems in use are basically imperfect and far from satisfactory.

And while the economic systems have at it with brickbats and other explosives the workers can chew on their thumb and listen to their stomachs. Verble God Bless America With Sense.

When two such popular programs start warping, the pyrotechnics are fast, furious and at times funny. Funny because neither system has a fighting chance on their own, as is — in other words it was a noble battle, yet no one was there; on its own.

Couple imitations trying to pass themselves off as "its"

It is possible that the workers could put up a better economic system, beginning from ground, up? The "shop" would choose their overseers and stewards — same as we choose the dog-catcher now — some — times to the sorrow of the dog.

And so on clear to the top of the pole — the sepulchre-ish tone to always come from the bottom and no ventriloquism allowed.

Such things however are furthest from the workers thoughts and he is patiently waiting for the big shots to pull a few fast ones.

They will. And if the worker doesn't land in the poorhouse it will be because the "pagey" burnt down.
